A" ~~~~~ The care stuff that's ideal for many home products like carpets, pillows, duvets and cushions 2 The disadvantage of virgin polyester is that it is made of oil, coal or natural gas. This when we use virgin polyester, we're exhausting the planet. The natural resources of €. Our answer to this is to replace all virgins with recycling in our products. In 2020, we achieved the milestone of replacing 79% of the virgin polyester used in IKEA textile products and accelerated the transformation towards Solo's target using recycled Polyes through the range of products where the polyester is used. The good thing is that polyester can be recycled over and over again, without adversely affecting the quality of our products. When we make products of the recycled polyester, we give a second life to the material that is not biodegraded and reduce the amount that otherwise can end in the dump or in the ocean. Instead, PET and other polyester sources are used to make textiles, storage boxes, kitchen fronts and even lamps. By using only recycled polyester that meets global recycling standards, we manage to ensure social, environmental and chemical practices in recycling production. ~~~~~ The Oca ". Instead, PET and other sources of polyps are used to make textiles, storage boxes, kitchen fronts and even lamps. The recycled poly © is as good as the virgin poly © in terms of appearance, quality and function, and produces about 50% less in CO2 emissions. And the material is equally clean and safe in every way. The recycled polyps makes us less dependent on the oil. The amount we convert, is equal to the amount of fuel fuel virgin that we eliminate from our raw material of polyps (excludes the potential dye and other treatments of production of polyps Recycled recycled posts). With some exceptions, the challenge is not the conversion of polypter into recycling, but to put it at all provision of everyone keeping it affordable. Buy low environmental impact products often comes with a higher price. We want to change that when working to make recycled polyps products more affordable and accessible to many people. IKEA undertakes to end the dependence on the fosile materials and only use renewable or recycled materials by 2030. We are accelerating this movement for the polyp in our range and we intend to replace all virgin polyps in our textile products with recycled . In 2020, IKEA replaced 79% of virgin polyps used in IKEA textile products with recycled polyester. In volume, this means that we convert 130,000 tons of recycled polyps, and save 200,000 tons of virgiant polya. The year we have not reached our 100%goal, but we have gone far and surpassed many obstacles along the way. These volumes make us a líder in becoming recycled polyps and we hope that our decisions can inspire and motivate the entire industries to change. In Ikea, we demand that all recycled polyps used in products of Provenga of recyclers who comply with the world recycled y la trazabilidad if the example of the product Ikea to the requirements for Ikea Provéers. Only using recycled recycled that meets the Global Recycled Standards we manage to secure social, environmental and chemical practices at the recyclereÁÁAs production. We believe that the GRS standard is the best standard on the market today. We work with our partners and textile organisations such as Textile Exchange to further improve standards on recycled materials, including traceability of material beyond the recycling units. units.
